Participation in MARS is a voluntary activity undertaken by qualified amateur radio operator/citizens who contribute their time and use of personal communications equipment to achieve the objectives of the Department of Defense. The activity is strictly voluntary, and the US Government, Department of Defense, Department of the Army, or US Army NETCOM provide no compensation, reimbursement, insurance, or other benefits to volunteers. Volunteers are free to separate from MARS at any time. MARS is a structured organization and utilizes volunteers in leadership positions to direct, train and oversee activities. Members are authorized to operate on government radio frequencies; and are required to meet minimum qualifications, equipment and recurring training goals. MARS members will hold unclassified but sensitive information; the nature of Defense activities require high degree of personal discretion and professional conduct.

I understand the voluntary nature of MARS and agree to utilize my personal radio equipment and contribute my time in support of the defense requirements of the United States, at my own risk and without compensation.

I understand it may be necessary to modify my radio equipment to operate on government frequencies, to complete required training, to meet minimum participation requirements and to participate in ongoing training and exercises.

I agree to share sensitive information only with authorized individuals whom have a need to know. I will not reveal sensitive information which has become known to me through MARS to unauthorized parties or in public forums.

I will comply with all Army MARS rules, policies, regulations and directives; cooperate fully with the MARS volunteer leadership and staff, as well as the government officials and their contractors who have oversight of MARS.
